Vermin species

The Environment Code has declared some fishes, shellfishes or frogs as “vermin”. These species can provoke biological unbalance. When you catch them, you must kill them. They must not be replaced in water or transported alive on pain of fine.

The most common vermin species are :

- Brown bullhead Ictalurus melas
- Pumpkinseed Lepomis gibbosus
- California crayfish Pacifastacus leniusculus
- American crayfish Orconectes limosus
- Louisiana crayfish Procambarus clarkii

In first category, pike, perch, pike-perch and largemouth bass are declared undesirable. They must not be put back in water.

Specific courses :

- ❖ Fishing carp by night (see map on revue “Pêche 87” 2011) : fishing carp by night is authorized only from the bank and with vegetable baits, fish must be put back in water after being caught and fishermen must be indicated by light sources.
- ❖ Grant course : are authorized only artificial lures with hook without any tongue ; brown trout and grayling must be put back in water.

Question / answer

What can I do if I lose or destroy my fishing licence?

We can't give a copy of the fishing licence : it must be changed and paid again like passport.

What happens if a fisherman has bought his fishing licence in an other department?

If the fishing licence has been delivered in one of the 73 departments members of the Halieutic Club or EHGO and has the halieutic tax on it, the fisherman is in order. If not, he must pay the halieutic tax. In all other cases, there is no reciprocity.
